

A fast learner with a capital « F »

When it came to finding a stimulating and rewarding job, Benoit couldn't have done better than Proaction—the company is constantly driven to excel, full of new relationships and new challenges, and one success after another.

On the hunt for a career where he'd always be learning and get to work with a number of different companies, Benoit was immediately drawn to Proaction's unique approach based on improving management by focusing on proximity coaching.
« I simply couldn't see myself joining a consulting firm that generates piles of reports! »

A CONSTANT SOURCE OF INSPIRATION

Benoit soon discovered that the company knows how to tap into its employees' strengths. Major responsibilities are assigned to those who can handle it. Routine and plateaus simply do not exist. Employees are constantly finding new inspiration and are pushed beyond their comfort zone.

As a project manager at Proaction, Benoit leads his team and clients through challenges. What motivates him is to watch them grow and make decisions they would never have made before working for Proaction.

A STRONG WORK AND LIFE ETHIC

From a professional standpoint, Benoit needs to feel that he can make a difference.

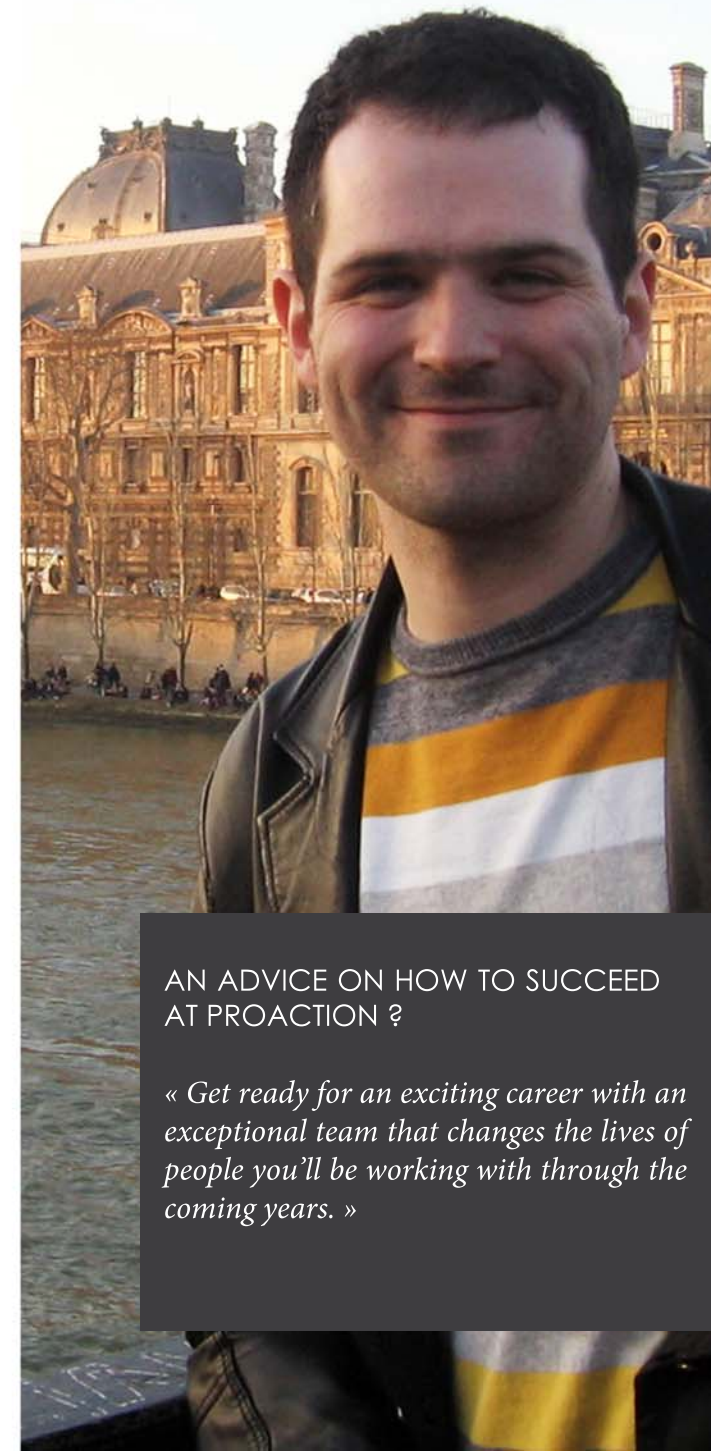

He finds it inspiring to see the management team become more thorough and better problem solvers. « There's a new energy amongst the team and it's having an impact on the company culture. What's more, the team is seeing improved performance results. »

Not only does he take great pride in helping companies succeed, Benoit strives to make the world a better place outside of work too.

A CULTURE VULTURE

Benoit adores the arts and cultural exchanges with other communities. This works out well with his job since you're more prone to see him at the airport rather than the subway station.
« Not only does it allow me to travel, but working abroad also helps me learn about cultural differences. »

Benoit is currently finishing his MBA and enjoys reading, going to the movies, and competing in triathlons
